BRYN MAWR COLLEGE
BRYN MAWR, PENNSYLVANIA

CAROLA WOERISHOFFER GRADUATE DEPARTMENT
OF SOCIAL ECONOMY AND SOCIAL RESEARCH

July 22, 1919.

Pres. Robert A. Falconer,
University of Toronto,
Toronto, Canada.

My dear Mr. Falconer:

You will, I know, be interested to learn that the courses in preparation for Industrial Supervision and Employment Management have proved so successful that the National War Council of the Young Women's Christian Association will cooperate with this Department in offering again the training carried on last year. The students will, however, pursue the courses in theory, technique and practice at the College and in neighboring manufacturing and mercantile establishments for the entire academic year, and will carry on their continuous field practice during the following summer wherever, in the opinion of Miss Bezanson, the Instructor in charge of these courses, it will be most desirable.

A new plan of courses in preparation for Community Organization has also been introduced which will, I hope, prove a contribution equal in value to our industrial courses.

The new courses and seminaries include one in the methods, technique, and principles of Community Organization, one in Community Art through which students may be trained to discover, develop and crystallize artistic expression in the community, and one in the Principles of Education applied to community work. The unique opportunity for practice offered by the very successful community centre of the town of Bryn Mawr, by the new block organization being promoted under the auspices of the Community Service Alliance of Philadelphia and by the established settlements of Philadelphia, combined with the seminaries in Social Psychology, Social Philosophy and Municipal Government promise a completeness of preparation which I believe unusual.

I should like to call your attention to a third development of our work which has come through cooperation with the Municipal Court of Philadelphia. Judge Brown, Chairman of the Court and Dr. Robinson, Chief Probation Officer, have been anxious to develop an educational centre at the Court. As a result, Miss Kellogg, Instructor in charge of the courses in Social Guardianship, has served as an officer of the Court, and our sudents have had this excellent advantage of field practice and instruction. With the advent of Dr. Leopold at the Court, with whom co-operation has been established and through the work of our Department of Psychology at Bryn Mawr College, training in Psychiatri- Social Service as well as in Mental Analysis and Social Case Work in the family court has been greatly strengthened.

The introduction of the new plans and establishment of new courses has delayed the publication of our annual announcements which give full outlines of courses and requirements. The announcement is now being sent to you under separate cover addressed to your office and I should be very glad if you would call attention of suitable candidates to the opportunities outlined and to the scholarships offered. A few scholarships in Industrial Supervision and Employment Management and a few in Community Organization are yet unawarded and also one in Court Work or Social Guardianship. If you would care to have me forward a copy of our announcement to your summer address, I shall be glad to do so, and also to send a copy of the announcement and an application blank for admission or scholarship to any student whom you may recommend.

Appreciating your cooperation in the past, I remain

Very sincerely yours,

Susan M. Kingsbury
